SUBJECT: SIGINT Cooperation Between U.K. and
2. Although USCIB declined to approve a similar proposal by LSIB in October 1951 (USCIB 14/154), I recommend that USCIB reconsider its position and concur in this request. 3. Inasmuch as there has been no U.K. reply to my proposal dated 18 December 1953), I do not propose to forward USCIB's views in this matter immediately. However, I should like to have a decision on the request so that I may reply to Director, GCHQ, as soon as I receive his comments on the RALPH J. CANINE Lieutenant General, US Army Director Incl:

DGC/3967. December 29th 1953.

Director, National Security Agency.

I am writing to you on behalf of L.S.I.B. to ask if you will seek the approval of U.S.C.I.B. to an L.S.I.B. is proposing that the U.K. should
// \\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\
to the service the U.S. is expecting to initiate at an agreed moment to the as a result of the 1953 UK/USA Planning Conference recommendations.
2. There is no doubt that such a service is desired by the organisation. This was evident when senior members of the organisation were in London recently to discuss U.K. co-operation Although they did not attempt to apply pressure on the U.K. representatives, they made it clear (not for the first time) that they considered the U.K. was getting much the better part of the bargain. Though they are very pleased with the equipment sent to them, it is apparent that they will never think the co-operation entirely fair unless the U.K.
3. In L.S.I.B.'s view it is very important that the best possible relations with the should be preserved. Seen from the U.K., owing partly to its geographical position, partly to the completeness of its service and, above all, to the fact that the are technically far more competent, both in communications and non-communications interception, and employ larger resources, than any of the other countries G.C.H.Q. and, presumably, N.S.A. are and there is no reason why this dependence should ever decrease: indeed, if the future, Moreover, if the present deployment of U.K. and U.S. had in any way to be curtailed, the relative value of the would rise still more. L.S.I.B. therefore considers that every reasonable step should be taken which will help to ensure the continued availability of the source.
The provision of some form of limited feed-back would be an obvious step of this kind.
4. A further advantage to be obtained from the proposal stems from the fact that are heavily overstrained at the present time as a result of the the U.K. were to supply the it should lead to a speedier and more efficient allocation of their limited resources to the required targets. This would increase the value of their effort to the U.S. and the U.K. It is also highly probable that they could be persuaded to make further attempts to
